An Introduction to the Census

A census of the population of Britain has been held by the Government every ten years since 1801. However, as the earlier ones were not kept and, public viewing of the others is prevented until 100 years has elapsed, we (at the time of writing) can only see those for the years 1841, 1851, 1861, 1871, 1881 and 1891. In 2002, the 1901 census will become available for public viewing. [NB This book was published in 2000, so more censuses have been released since then.]

These various censuses can be seen at the Public Record Office in London and at numerous other locations throughout the country, including public libraries. The 1881 census has been fully indexed and the 1851 partially, and both are superb finding aids. The 1881 census index has been extensively used in the compilation of family trees for this book but, due to copyright, cannot be reproduced.

The following pages show information that has been extracted for our Jephcott families, from the six census years mentioned. All except the 1841 census show the address at which the individual person lived, their name, their position in the household in relation to the head of the household, whether they are married or not, widowed or otherwise. It gives their exact age (subject to the honesty of the informant - which was not assured), their occupation, where they were born and finally, makes a note of persons who were deaf, dumb or blind.

The 1841 census differs in that it only gives exact ages for children under 15, but rounds down to the nearest five the age for adults. It does not give a place of birth, only whether or not the individual was born in the county. Furthermore, it does not give their position in the household, nor whether married or otherwise.

The census is a very useful document that can greatly add to our knowledge of an ancestor. We can check details from it against the birth, marriage and death certificates that have already been obtained from the General Record Office (GRO).

A Warning

The enumerators who took down the information from each household, had no alternative but to record the information that they were given as being the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Many inaccuracies have ended up in the records. Whether these occurred by mistake, or by misrepresentation by the informants, can only be guessed at. They must have met with some aggressive people doing this work.

The most common errors appear to be with ages of individuals and much of this must have been to do with vanity on the part of the informant. One individual that I have researched in detail gave differing ages (taking into account the ten year span) each time, always too low. Perhaps he did not want his younger wife to know his true age! Even when he died, his age at death was given wrongly. He had certainly had the last laugh!

The moral of this is - 'always check your facts and don't dismiss a record just because it doesn't fit exactly'.

NB When the book was published, the last time in 2000, there was no internet access to the census, in the way that we have it today. So, it is rather pointless to repeat information here that can so easily be accessed far more fully on the internet today – or whatever the data source is known as when you come upon this. We researchers had to do it the hard way at the beginning.
