Longevity

This is a sample extract taken from the GRO deaths index, between the years 1866 to 1895. The sample was taken to obtain an 'Infant Mortality and Longevity Rating' in a nationwide study on various surname studies. This survey was carried out by the late Mr Eric Banwell, a member of the Guild of One-Name Studies (see GOONS Journal Vol 3 No 9).

Stated Age at Death	No. of Males	No. of Females	Total
0	69	65	134
1 to 20	67	46	113
21 to 70	92	112	204
Over 70	41	55	96
Total of all ages	269	278	547

In order to compare our data with that of the survey, We have expressed the figures in percentages of the totals, as shown below. The figures in brackets are those obtained from the results of the survey, for which our total of 547 formed 1.2% of the total.

Stated Age at Death	Males %	Females %	Total %
0	25.6 (26.6)	*23.3 (22.5)	24.5 (24.6)
1 to 20	*24.9 (22.3)	16.5 (23.1)	20.6 (22.7)
21 to 70	34.2 (36.9)	*40.3 (37.3)	37.3 (37.1)
Over 70	*15.2 (14.2)	*19.8 (17.1)	17.6 (15.6)
Total of all ages	100.0	100.0	100.0

The * shows where we exceed the average, by as much as 3%. It is not much of a difference and does not indicate that the Jephcotts are much different to any other families. If anything, our over 70s show that we are longer lived than the average, especially the women.

Those of you who are surprised at the extent of 19th century infant deaths are able to see that we compare closely with others. This just goes to show what a difficult business child birth was in past times.

Taking into account a search of the St Catherine's House deaths index between 1866 (when ages were first recorded) and 1920 (when my index stops), there were no centenarians (100 +), only a couple of nonagenarians (90 to 99), but many octogenarians (80 to 89).

More recently, there has only been one centenarian Jephcott to our knowledge. This was Francis Frederick Jeffcoat (family CB), who is detailed in section 6.

Burials at the London Road Cemetery, Coventry.

The following burials are recorded in the index to burials at the London Road Cemetery in Coventry. There are probably other burials after 1956, although this has not been checked.
